

Herng Fuu Richard Yeh

Bio

Herng Fuu Richard Yeh was born and raised in the head quarter of Taiwan; Taipei until he reaches 15 years old. He was fully influenced by his grand parents a bamboo artisan, and a fashion designer in his childhood. While visiting, grand parents he would help to make simple products and further sell them. After Richard reaches 15 years old, he decided to move to Boston for high school. During high school years, he experiences arts, design, photography, and even acting. In the year of juniors in high school, it was really clear to him that Design is what he wanted to do and most interested to him, Richard decided to move to New York City to Parsons and specialize in product design. Richard always trying his best to do the best he can in the given amount of time for all products. He respects people around him and constantly learning from others. He thinks to establish the connection between the product and customer is the most important thing in product design.

Project Title

Ka-viaz

Preserve the Artisanal Techniques

Project Description

This product system spreads awareness of regional Taiwanese crafts to a global audience while sparking tribal children's interest in traditional processes and creating opportunities for indigenous people. Part of the funds raised will go toward scholarships to benefit tribal youth.

Materials

Paper Loom: Open source template online

Products: Porcelain

Acknowledgements

My family, Richard Penney, Robert Kirkbride, Seth Nagelberg, PJ Carlino, Patricia Beirne, Jesse Villalobos, Cynthia Lawson, Cheryl Robbins, Nidhi Srinivas, Len Mayer, Bridget Parris, Linda Goode Bryant, Shana agid, Ori Kleiner, Kate Teale, all the teachers that had taught me before and all my friends.